

vReiki One: Introduction to vReiki

Discover how you can have the most deep-acting and long-lasting results with Reiki Therapy for the 21st Century. How effective any therapy is, relies on how well it aligns with you and your needs—Reiki therapy is no different.

By working with Reiki in a modern perspective, you can apply treatment to your life, where and when you need it most. Tackling issues that did not exist in the last century, needs of therapeutic perspective that is created for the life you live today. And vReiki focuses on many of life's real-world challenges.

In this foundation course, we look at the concept of the Universal Constant of Ki to know how it was viewed from the standpoint of ancient beliefs and then we develop this to a modern perspective, investigating the correlations between old and new. Discussing the philosophies, history, and evolution of Reiki therapies in the West, we then realign both with the vReiki system and through the traditional practices.

We study the three areas of Reiki as a self-development practice: inner-work, self-treatment, and helping others. Using a mixture of traditional and modern techniques we transform our Reiki interactions into an integrated and fluid practice that can enable the letting go of old, limiting beliefs towards health, relationships, prosperity, the world, and simple joy.

This leads us to a more inclusive attitude, through embracing diversity within your therapeutic approach. Hence, we seek true holistic health and wellbeing, not only in physical and emotional respects, but also in our philosophies and spiritual being.

The course continues with orientation to Jiki: The Ki of Magnetism and the source of order, structure, and expanded mind abilities. Jiki creates the attraction and relationships between people, situations, and dynamics in our lives. For example, deciding if we possess a magnetic attraction towards money, love, and joy, or whether we repulse those things in favour of poverty, struggle, and loss.

Jiki is used in the development of intuitive abilities and the ways we can communicate to those who usually defy awareness. The orientation to Jiki, offers immediate and permanent abilities to sense the world beyond that of usual perception and when combined with Reiki, presents us with a huge range of tools and skills that can revolutionise our spiritual development, psychic intelligence (PsyQ) and healing processes.
